

How to Spot a Good Guardian

A good guardian:

- Treats the person under guardianship with dignity.
- Involves the person in all decision-making, to the greatest extent possible.
- Places the least restrictive options on the person's freedom and rights.
- Maximizes the self-reliance, dignity, and independence of the person.
- Respects that the money and property being managed belong to the person.
- Adheres to the highest professional standards and ethical principles defined by the state and the National Guardianship Association.
