

About Us

The Jane Pauley Community Health Center is named after Jane Pauley, a 1968 Warren Central High School graduate who grew up in the area and is well known as the former anchor of NBC-TV's "Today" and "Dateline" programs. She is the current host of "CBS Sunday Morning." The health center was established in 2009 to provide integrated healthcare for all of the people in the communities we serve. The Jane Pauley Community Health Center is a non-profit federally qualified health center, which allows us to offer a discounted rate via a sliding fee scale to any patient who qualifies.
